Information about our Board, management and development team is provided in section 9.
START-UP VENTURE	The Company has secured a factory lease of 4,000 sqm in Pakenham and orders have been placed for the new machinery to build all the wall and roof frames, roofing as well as kitchen and laundry cabinetry, wardrobes and bathroom units. All main components of the builds will be fabricated and controlled in-house. This will ensure supply of all critical components. The building method deployed can deliver completed projects within an 8 – 12-week timeframe on virtually any site in suburban Victoria. The shortened timeframe to completion will deliver savings in finance and holding costs, construction costs and increased rental returns. Overall, preliminary cost analysis indicates savings to be in the vicinity of 40% compared to conventional stick build construction.

Prefabricated construction businesses take on additional funding exposure in order to facilitate the off-site build of the properties it supplies to.

Equipment, materials and labour costs can generally only be recovered after the completed homes have been delivered and installed on-site. The Company intends to fund the off-site component of all works and aims to recover the costs and margin for each build from the value which it supplies to each home. There is a risk that the aims of the Company will not be achievable.

4. PREFABRICATED CONSTRUCTION

4.1 ABOUT PREFABRICATED CONSTRUCTION

Prefabricated buildings are structures that are constructed in a factory setting before being transported for assembly on site.

Despite having been used as a method of construction for decades, this type of prefabricated structure is increasingly being used for a wider range of construction projects, ranging from offices and hospitality builds to residential properties, and more.

4.2 HOW ARE THEY MADE?

Prefabricated buildings are manufactured in sections away from construction sites before being delivered to the desired location where they are installed into a final building design. 60-90% of the work is completed in a factory-controlled environment, either as a complete structure or as prefabricated subassemblies for a larger project.

This offsite construction allows the use of modern manufacturing techniques to create the prefabricated modules. These prefabricated units can be placed end-to-end or stacked up to create different configurations. The prefabricated construction process is completed onsite using inter-module connections (or inter-connections) to bind the units together.

Permanent prefabricated buildings, such as prefabricated homes, are built to standards that are equal or higher than traditional site built properties, ensuring high levels of quality control.

Permanent prefabricated construction (PMC) can be carried out with a variety of building materials, such as concrete, steel or wood, and can also include provision for adding windows, power supplies, water and sewage pipes, telecommunications, air conditioning and more. Many of these additional features can be installed before being taken to site, saving construction time later in the process. These PMC structures are designed to remain in one location once built and can include as many storeys as allowed by building regulations.

The design phase is particularly important in the creation of prefabricated buildings. Design for Manufacture and Assembly (DfMA) practices need to be used to make sure the assembly tolerances are controlled and ensure any slack or misalignment can be taken up. CAD systems, additive manufacture (3D printing) and manufacturing control systems are important for prefabricated construction since the components cannot easily be realigned onsite.

4.3 TYPES

Prefabricated buildings generally fall under one of two types - permanent or temporary. Within these types, the actual buildings can range from 'flat-pack' solutions to façade systems and those where much of the construction is completed offsite before being delivered and put together.

4.4 WHAT IS MEANT BY PREFABRICATED CONSTRUCTION?

Prefabricated construction is a process where a building is constructed offsite using controlled plant conditions before being transported and assembled at a final location. This type of construction can incorporate a range of different building types and floor plans.

4.5 WHAT ARE PREFABRICATED UNITS?

Prefabricated units are the sections that are joined together to make a prefabricated building or house. The number of units required differs depending on the size and style of the finished project.

4.6 HOW MUCH DO THEY COST?

The cost varies depending on scale of the project and the types of materials used.

Other factors, such as the inclusion of internal fittings and fixtures, can also impact the cost of a prefabricated building. However, case studies show they can offer significant savings when compared to traditional construction. This is due to factors such as weather not being a problem in delaying a project schedule and the ability to work on the structure offsite while the site is being prepared, reducing construction industry lead-times for completion. No wastage of materials due to precision cutting, safer work environments, disruptions to traffic and neighbours are reduced due to the speed of construction.

4.7 HOW LONG DO THEY LAST?

How long a prefabricated building lasts depends on whether it has been designed to be temporary or permanent. However, where many people still associate prefabricated buildings with temporary structures, modern prefabricated constructions can be built to last just like a traditional build.

PMCs have to meet building regulations that meet or exceed the same building standards required for traditional builds, and many are built using the same materials as regular buildings. While prefabricated buildings undergo tests to ensure quality (and safety), they will still need maintenance just like any other construction to maintain them and extend their life.

With this all taken into account, prefabricated buildings can last for decades.

4.8 WHAT IS VOLUMETRIC PREFABRICATED CONSTRUCTION?

Volumetric prefabricated construction is where as much of the construction is completed offsite as possible. This could, for example, mean adding the fittings for a bathroom before the room is brought to site and fitted into the rest of the structure.

This type of construction involves the internal finishes being fabricated offsite in factory conditions, cutting down the need for tradespeople being employed on the building site itself. This not only improves health and safety by reducing the number of people needed onsite, but can also reduce the time for the build to be completed.

4.9 BENEFITS OF PREFABRICATED CONSTRUCTION COMPARED TO TRADITIONAL CONSTRUCTION

Prefabricated construction offers several advantages over traditional construction techniques. These include:

- Construction delays due to inclement weather and other onsite issues are not an issue with factory manufacture, eliminating many potential delays to project completion dates
- Factory conditions allow for a higher quality product with improved operating procedures and monitoring, while employees are able to work in a safer environment. Construction can also more easily be extended 24/7 if required to complete a project
- Material supplies are easier to control in a factory setting, reducing wastage and thereby cost, as well as lowering the environmental impact of a build. The UK group WRAP, estimates that this can equate to up to a 90% reduction in material use as compared to traditional builds
- Manufacture of the modules can begin before onsite preparations, such as foundations, are complete, speeding up the whole build process
- Prefabricated construction allows for different parts of the building to be built at the same time – further reducing the time taken to complete a project
- Prefabricated construction is highly suited to remote locations where onsite building could prove difficult or expensive. Building away from these locations also means that staff can work in places where medical and sanitary provision is more readily available if required
- Prefabricated structures can be added to over time or even be treated as a relocatable building which can also be readily refurbished to meet a new need
- Because prefabricated units need to meet regulations for travel and assembly, the final product can end up being more durable than a traditional build that didn't have to be assessed part by part
- Many prefabricated units use Structural Insulated Panels which are light yet durable and provide improved thermal insulation as well as damp and cold resistance when compared to materials like timber. The factory construction also removes the potential for high levels of moisture being trapped inside the construction, improving the quality of the product

- Prefabricated constructions have been shown to offer time savings of more than 50% when compared to traditional builds, with the inherent cost savings this provides

4.10 APPLICATIONS

Where prefabricated building used to be associated with temporary structures, improvements in quality, design and unit sizes mean that this type of construction continues to find new applications. From offices to homes and even larger builds like sports halls, the uses of prefabricated construction are constantly growing.

No longer associated with small, low-cost structures, the modern wave of prefabricated buildings are proving that they can be used for any number of applications while offering cost and time savings along with comparable levels of quality to traditional builds.

5. NDIS SPECIALIST DISABILITY ACCOMMODATION

5.1 OVERVIEW

The National Disability Insurance Scheme (NDIS) is a Federal Act developed in 2013 to allow people with a disability to exercise choice and control about matters that affect them—such as their housing. SDA housing is housing built to a standard not readily available in the general housing supply.

The Australian Government was one of the first countries in the world to be a signatory of the 'UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities'. The Federal Government via the NDIS SDA program have committed $700,000,000 annually for the next 20 years to investors who provide specially constructed housing. The SDA housing program aims to increase the supply of suitable accessible housing.

The SDA housing program aims to increase the supply of suitable accessible housing through generous rental subsidy payments.

The percentage increase of the number of participants with SDA supports in the Scheme grew by 9.4%, or 1,665 participants, in the June 2022 quarter. New South Wales and Victoria are still the 2 largest states by overall participants with SDA funding in their plans

5.2 STABLE

The NDIS is backed by legislation that requires agreement from all States and Territories before any changes are made.

5.3 FAST GROWTH

To encourage investment in SDA Property, the National Disability Insurance Agency (NDIA) provides a generous rental subsidy. This scale of this building project cannot be over stated and has been slated as the largest social housing building program Australia has ever seen.

5.4 ELIGIBLE PARTICIPANT PROFILES

There were 19,358 participants with SDA supports at the end of Q4 FY21-22.

5.5 FULLY FUNDED

The Government has committed $700m annually for payments to SDA property investors a year, indexed for the next 20 years!

5.6 WHAT IS SDA?

Specialist Disability Accommodation (SDA) is housing that has been specially designed to suit the needs of people who have 'extreme functional impairment' or 'very high support needs'.

SDA payments for individual participants under the NDIS enable them to pay to live in SDA housing.

SDA payments are provided for purpose-built housing for NDIS participants with very high and complex support needs to enable them to lead an ordinary life. These payments are made to a provider of an SDA property when someone who has been approved for SDA funding is living in it.

The SDA model of funding under the NDIS creates a user-driven market that enables people with disability to decide where they live and who they live with. The model will deliver better housing outcomes for people with very high and complex disability support needs.

The SDA housing market is a new and exciting market, which is expected to create thousands of new dwellings for people with disability over the next few years. However, there is complexity in the way policy governing SDA payments operates, as set out in the SDA Pricing and Payment Framework and associated documents (ndis.gov.au/providers/housing-and-living-supports-and-services/housing).

5.7 ABOUT THE SDA DESIGN STANDARD

The SDA Design Standard has been developed through extensive consultation across government, private sector, the housing industry and disability organisations.

It sets out detailed design requirements that will be incorporated into newly built SDA, seeking enrolment under the National Disability Insurance Scheme.

This standard has four categories of SDA design which are set out in the SDA Rules:

BUILDING TYPES

Participants that are deemed eligible for SDA will, as part of their NDIS Plan, most probably have detailed what building type they have been funded for.

There are four types of building that can be SDA:

APARTMENT

Apartments are self-contained units that are part of a larger residential building. Apartments are typically built above or below another dwelling. Self-contained dwellings that are separated from other dwellings by walls alone are not apartments but are likely to be a villa, duplex or townhouse.

VILLA, DUPLEX OR TOWNHOUSE

Villas, duplexes and townhouses are dwellings for one, two or three residents, which are generally separate but semi-attached properties within a single title or strata-titled land area. Dwellings are separated by a fire-resistant wall (fire-resistance isn't required for existing housing).

HOUSE

Houses are detached, low-rise dwellings with garden or courtyard areas.

GROUP HOME

The description of a house above also applies to group homes. Group homes are different from other houses because more people live in them (often four or five long-term residents).

SDA PRICE GUIDE

Like other parts of the NDIS, SDA employs a market-based approach by allocating funding to eligible participants. A participant can use that confirmed funding to then source the supports that appeal to them from the market.

For SDA this means the NDIS provides funding through a participant's plan and the participant (often with additional support such as a Support Coordinator) then finds and applies for the SDA option that best suits their needs.

The SDA Price Guide is a summary of prices that apply to SDA under the NDIS.

The updated SDA Price Guide and calculator, for New Builds, are as follows:

6. CO-LIVING ACCOMMODATION

6.1 OVERVIEW

Co-living is a residential model that accommodates multiple tenants where they have their personal room space but share common communal areas. Residents generally share a common living room, dining room, kitchen, laundry and communal outdoor area.

From a tenant's perspective, co-living has an economic benefit, including lower rent and affordability, along with environmental and social benefits too. Co-living homes are considered sustainable and can offer the resident security along with a greater sense of social belonging.

This residential model is perfect for millennials/young professionals/students, basically anyone who's looking to save up on rent and utility money and doesn't mind sharing common areas with other tenants.

6.2 WHY CO-LIVING

Co-living is slightly different to the traditional approach to property development. People often confuse co-living with 'rooming houses' — the main difference is in the council approval process and some other features, including lockable rooms.

The main drawcard for investors is that they can attract higher rent through co-living houses than they might with a single property otherwise, where the additional space is being under-utilised. Utilising the full space in co-living properties is what helps to increase the rental income.

For example, a 4-bedroom property that may advertise at $600 per week on the standard residential market, with one lease agreement, may fetch $275 per week per room with nine separate rental agreements, bringing the total income to $2,475 per week.

Indicative Floor Plan

6.3 HOW CO-LIVING WORKS FOR OWNERS

Using a simple example, this can be extrapolated, depending on the number of co-living participants per site:

- There are 9 individual tenants in the Co-living Home all on individual tenancy agreements
- Rental is $250-$300 per week per room - dependent on the local market
- Total income is $2,250-$2,700 per week
- Comparable income for a standard home is $450 to $600 per week
- Homes are fully furnished - tenants just move in (some program managers exclude bedroom furniture)
- Property is fully managed by dedicated program managers
- Co-living Homes delivers significantly greater income than a standard investment property.

6.4 THE MARKET

Demand for co-living accommodation comes from a diverse range of people. And, there are a lot of them. Co-living accommodation fills a void in the market for single people from all walks of life seeking quality, personal living solutions.

In the current market, a lot of people are compromising and accepting what they can get rather than what they really want. That is because the supply of accommodation is based on a traditional family-based residential model. A lot of accommodation servicing these segments is simply a room and not much else.

In comparison, a co-living designed house provides:

- A home where people can live with common interests and lifestyles
- Own, dedicated personal space
- Own, private bathroom
- Lockable pantry and storage
- Fully furnished and ready to live in
- Air conditioning
- Realistic rental costs
- Interactive property management

Supply of the 'right' product is very limited v demand. People looking for the 'right' product are prepared to travel a bit further and pay a bit more to get it because most of all the accommodation on offer out there right now is well below the standards that they are looking for.

There is clear demand (and lots of it) for the right product.

7. RISKS OF INVESTING

7.1 RISKS

All investments are subject to risk and there are a number of risks which can impact on the performance of your investment, should they occur. Investments may not perform as expected resulting in a loss of capital or income or a failure to meet your investment objectives. Due to a number of potential risks it is possible dividends will not be paid at all or that investors lose all of their capital.

The key assumptions here are that the Company will be able to attract enough investors in a limited amount of time to form enough capital to conduct its investment business. It is also assumed that there will be enough demand for its investment from potential real estate developers. It is also assumed that the Company management has the required skills to perform its role and will perform it as described in this offer document. Before you decide to invest, you should give consideration of the specific risk factors laid out in the Investment Highlights. In addition to those specific risks, below are some general risks related to investing that you should also factor in alongside other information contained in this Information Memorandum.

7.2 PREFABRICATED CONSTRUCTION RELATED RISKS

LACK OF CUSTOMIZATION WITH PREFABRICATED CONSTRUCTION

Prefabricated construction involves the mass production of components, which is perfect for apartment buildings, hotels, and subdivision homes, but not for projects where custom designs and sizes are needed. Using prefabricated construction to create unique components can significantly reduce the time and cost advantages.

Customization is the single biggest advantage that on-site construction has over prefabricated construction. Even slight changes in plan designs can have significant costs.

To be read in conjunction with the Builtfast Overview document, which contains a section dedicated to how risk is mitigated.

7.3 NDIS / CO-LIVING RELATED RISKS

OVERCAPITALISATION RISK

Well-designed SDA-registered and co-living properties can present as any other residential dwelling; however, for the design categories that the Company intends to target, they can be typically up to 20-35% (or higher depending on category and inclusions) more expensive to design and construct. The Company expects this to result in a completed cost for the types of properties it intends to acquire (inclusive of land content) that will typically range up to 10-20% more expensive (or higher) than similar residential dwellings on a like-for-like type and location basis.

There is a risk that if properties associated with the Company investments are unable to be tenanted or sold in the broader market that the additional capital costs associated with building to those requirements may not be able to be recouped.

SDA SCHEME RISKS

The possible financial returns for properties in the SDA scheme vary greatly depending on the style, scale and accessibility of the dwellings.

The type of SDA properties delivered into the scheme, the target tenants, demand within a given location and overall amenity of the housing location can all impact the returns the Company is able to generate. Particular accommodation settings may have higher vacancy rates in the longer term.

Whilst these risks are carefully considered during the due diligence phase of asset opportunity consideration, and there are mitigation measures that can be taken for such risks, they must be contemplated when making a decision to invest in the Company.

7.4 SPECIFIC RISKS

DEPENDENCE UPON KEY PERSONNEL

The Company depends on the talent and experience of the Company's personnel as its primary asset. Should any of its key personnel leave, this may have a negative impact on the Company. It may be difficult to replace them, or to do so in a timely manner or at comparable expense.

The Company's ability to attract and retain personnel will have a direct correlation upon their ability to deliver their commitments and achieve forecast revenues. Additionally, increases in recruitment, wages and contractor costs may adversely impact upon the financial performance of the Company.

LIQUIDITY

The Preference shares will not be listed on any stock exchange. As such, there is no secondary market to buy or sell Preference shares .

Therefore, an investment in Preference shares should be considered non liquid. The investors are however free to find their own buyers and the management of the Company will assist in recording such private sales in the Company's share register.

OPERATIONAL AND COMPLIANCE RISK

Operational risk relates to the risk of loss resulting from inadequate or failed internal control processes, information technology systems or from external service providers which may impact on the Company's business. The Company is exposed to operational risk including, but not limited to, risks arising from processing errors, fraud, information technology system failures, failure of security and physical protection systems, pricing errors and employee negligence.

7.5 GENERAL INVESTMENT RISKS

ACCOUNTING STANDARDS

Australian accounting standards are set by the Australian Accounting Standards Board (AASB) and are outside the Directors' and Company's control. Changes to accounting standards issued by AASB could materially adversely affect the financial performance and position reported in the Company's financial statements.

FORWARD LOOKING STATEMENTS

This Information Memorandum contains forward looking statements. Those statements are based upon the Directors' current expectations in regard to future events or results. Actual results may be materially affected by changes in circumstances, some of which may be outside the control of the Company. The reliance that investors place on the forecasts is a matter for their own commercial judgment. No representation or warranty is made that any forecast, assumption or estimate contained in this Information Memorandum will be achieved.

GENERAL ECONOMIC CONDITIONS

The Company's operating and financial performance is influenced by a variety of general economic and business conditions including the level of inflation, interest rates and government fiscal, monetary and regulatory policies.

Prolonged deterioration in general economic conditions, including an increase in interest rates, could be expected to have a corresponding adverse impact on the Company's operating and financial performance.

GOVERNMENT POLICY

The financial performance of the Company may be impacted by change to or changes in interpretation in respect of income tax legislation, GST legislation, stamp duty laws and local government regulations and by-laws related to investment and property developments. Changes in, or the introduction of, any law, regulation or policy affecting the Company's business or the Development (which may or may not have a retrospective effect) may have a material adverse impact on the Company's performance.

INTEREST RATE RISK

A reduction in overall interest rates would mean fewer opportunities for the Company to invest money profitably above the Company's target return. This would adversely impact the Company's ability to provide returns to investors.

REAL ESTATE MARKET DOWNTURN

While the Company believes that real estate projects in Capital cities in Australia will continue to command strong demand and lead to successful outcomes, it cannot predict with certainty the exact state of real estate market in the future. Investors should note that past performance may not be necessarily achieved in the future and a downturn in the real estate market may have a material adverse impact on the Company's performance.

TAXATION RISKS

A change to the current taxation regime in Australia or overseas may affect the Company and its Shareholders.

Personal tax liabilities are the responsibility of each investor. The Company is not responsible either for taxation or penalties incurred by investors.
